

WHAT STAYS IN VEGAS: YOUR HANGOVER

If your best hangover fix is a Bloody Mary for breakfast, you might want to schedule your next binge for Las Vegas, where the cure's more scientific. The science in question comes from Dr. Jason Burke, a board-certified anesthesiologist who has dedicated his career to the study and treatment of hangovers. The doc founded the Hangover Heaven bus (hangoverheaven.com) is a mobile hangover clinic, offering IV hydration, "Super" Vitamin B shots, oxygen, multivitamins and more in a soothing private, loungelike setting. It even offers an In-Room Therapy option (suitable for bachelor parties!) if you can't crawl to the bus. And if you have a date with an upcoming bottle, you can even book in advance. —Tom Bentley

Renegade's no-nonsense can design is as bold as its self-proclaimed "offensively delicious" approach to beer: Watch for cans of its cultish spicy-citrusy Ryeteous rye IPA, sessionable 5:00 Afternoon blonde ale and not-so-sessionable 11.2%-ABV Elevation Triple IPA.

SPEND LESS ON BEER.

We regularly lose hours in bottle shops, but the problem with beer stores is that their stock is limited only to the breweries that distribute within their state. And some of those bottles are wallet-busters! Enter LetsPour.com, a flash-sale site and app that offers deals on bottles from around the nation. So, if you're on the East Coast, you can purchase IPAs from Laurelwood and Fremont ($8.50 and $7.50, respectively), and West Coasters can score Cigar City cans for less than $5. The best part: Buy at least six beers (and of course, you will) and your order ships free; buy 12 and you get $10 off your total.

Don't let a language barrier keep you from ordering another round; here's how to ask for a beer, wherever you are.
